

Foreplay to Tantalize Your Man

Foreplay - it's one of those things that men and women just can't agree upon. Women generally crave it while men just can't seem to get the hang of it. Women like it longer while men prefer to skip it altogether. Granted, men are from Mars and women are from Venus, but the difference in the perspective of both sexes is no reason to chuck foreplay into black-hole oblivion. The fact is that foreplay is to sex what stretching is to workout--- you can't get to the main event if you don't do the warm-ups first. Needless to say, foreplay is an important sexual activity that should not be ignored.

The thing is that foreplay is always thought of as something only women enjoy. Like every other myth out there about sex, this one is about as true as the Roswell aliens. Even though some men don't care to admit it, they also like foreplay--- albeit not on the same level as women do. You can't expect them to beg for it, but they would appreciate it all the same if you initiate it. Flagger libidos be damned, because with products like Vigorelle.com and its turn-on cream, there is no excuse to skip foreplay. If you want to be hailed a sex goddess, then you have to learn how to tantalize your man through foreplay. And if you really want to drive your man wild, don't just learn how to do it, but learn how to do it well.

It's All About the Attitude

Generally, foreplay is a preamble to sex. Not to put pressure on you girls, but what you do during foreplay is a big indication of the things you're capable of doing afterwards. Now this does not mean that you have to be as prolific as Jenna Jameson in sex to be good at foreplay. More often than not, it's all about your attitude towards pleasing your man that counts. With that said, don't approach the activity as though it's a job, but approach it as though you would not want anything more than pleasing your partner.

The thing is that women have different sexual appetites. Some women have it big while some just don't. If you find that you can't initiate sex or that you want it but just not in the mood for it, don't despair because it's not yet the end of the world for you. There are good products out there that can help you get your groove back in bed. Products like Vigorelle, an all-natural sexual enhancement cream, might just be the thing you need to get your active sex life back on track.

Dress to Seduce

Unlike women who are into scent, touch, and taste, men are more into visuals. It means that they get turned on easily by what they see. You can use this to your advantage by donning a sexy attire whenever you and your man are about to do the horizontal tango. Unless you're into costumes, lacy lingerie would be enough. Even though this doesn't count as foreplay just yet, seeing you in a revealing dress is sure to get your man excited.

Explore Where You Haven't Gone Before

Just like how you girls would like your bodies to be explored and admired, guys also like it when you go the extra mile and discover other erogenous areas of their bodies. Instead of going straight down there, tantalize your man by going through different parts of his body and giving them the pampering they deserve. Take time to kiss those areas you haven't kissed before and stroke him in places that can make him groan in pleasure. Better yet, let him watch you explore yourself or take his hand to help you apply your Vigorelle cream.

Taste This, Taste That

The tongue isn't dubbed as the strongest muscle in our body for nothing. When it comes to the sack, your tongue can be a very powerful tool--- if used rightly. If you plan to plant pleasant kisses all over your man's body, be sure to incorporate a little tongue action. By little, I mean a bit of licking here and there--- not slobbering. Chances are your man will find this ticklish and it will heighten his sexual yearning even more. If you want to be more sensual, you can also use whipped cream and chocolate syrup with your Vigorelle turn-on cream into the process. It's all up to you.

Dirty Talk

This shouldn't come as a surprise--- men like being dirty talked to. Whispering to your guy the things you'd like to do to him is as big a turn on as actually doing it. You can talk as dirty to him as you like, but there's no need to use profanity. Unless both of you are okay with blunt words, then don't utter them. Also, when dirty talking, make sure that you do exactly what you told your man you'd do. Don't disappoint him by saying one thing and then doing another.

The Final Word

Men are aggressive by nature, but sometimes they also like to see their women take charge. Many men even find women who are aggressive and assertive a major turn on. If you want to push the sexual buttons of your man, be both in the bedroom, but don't go for the overkill.

If you have not thought about tantalizing your man through foreplay before, then now is the perfect time to consider it. Keep in mind that foreplay (and sex) is a give and take activity. Please your man the way you want to be pleased. In the end, you might be surprised to find out that it's actually very rewarding. There's absolutely nothing wrong with giving pleasure--- your man may even love you more for it!

About the Author

For further information, please visit www.female-enhancement.info

Source: <http://productsherbal.com>